

Sunlight Exposed

hold in your mouth my name and hold my heart in your hand keep our eyes locked the same i'm leaking through your fingers like sand i'm stripped down to blue skin may i feel the sun's warmth today or am i just the physical extension of sin waiting for reassurance that i'm okay i've fallen from the sky of nothing landing on a spear, kissing the clouds eyes rest on me and i feel everything now the whispers of the world in my ears are loud my eyes flipped around, pupils to my brain i'd make a fortune thinking about thinking i'm in my head but still out of frame i'm full of air and somehow still sinking!

how long did it take before you knew your self i'm a stranger in my own thick skull praying to learn but my loves poor health is growing in distance, from empty to full i hope the future is certain moving and making without me knowing i keep secrets from myself, my minds curtain if lies lit up, my diaries would be glowing